Dear friends.

We are stopping at Hotel Englischer (in Dutch) or English Hotel, which last name makes us Americans feel more at home. We are perfectly satisfied with this Hotel, and at Table d'hôte both days, we have said, Mr. Garrison, that we wished you were here to have some of the good puddings. We leave here early tomorrow morning, for Fluelen, thence by Diligence by the St. Gotthard Pass as far as the Hospice. We intend returning here Thursday night, when we shall be pleased if we find you here. We shall leave here again Friday sometime. It rained hard here all day yesterday, but we didn't care.

This afternoon we have had a great treat of music - on the Organ at the Cathedral.

We hope friend Webb is quite well, and that you all are jolly - George Pilo in the room studying the route we are going over tomorrow; he sends his love, and the message that he should be all right if he only(?) had an appetite. I wish you could see him eat. I believe I have eaten more at this Hotel than I have since I came to Switzerland your friends.
